GENERAL DESCRIPTION

Legal studies have always been an important component of academic programmes at the University of Pécs. In the period between 1950- 1971 it was the only faculty that secured the continuity of the University after WW II. In 2008 the Faculty celebrated the 85th anniversary of the modern law school in Pécs. The academic eminence of the Faculty is amply illustrated by the fact that the Constitutional Court of Hungary has a member from the University. The Faculty has long standing international relations, mainly with German speaking countries, e. g. with the universities of Marburg, Bayreuth, Vienna, and the law faculty at the University of Graz. Development became even more dynamic in 1992 when financial support granted by the World Bank enabled the Faculty to organise study-tours abroad and invite visiting professors.

The ERASMUS programme provides our teachers and students with new possibilities. The number of our Erasmus partner universities and, as a result, the number of those taking part in the mobility programme is increasing year by year, at present the Faculty has 54 Erasmus partner universities all over Europe.

In recent years the Faculty has established co-operative relations with law faculties in the former socialist countries (e.g. Kolozsvár, Novi Sad, Rijeka, and Wroclaw) which involve teacher and student mobility and short visits. The successful CEEPUS (Central European Exchange Programme for University Studies) applications of the Faculty in the academic years of 2005/2006 and 2008/2009 lead to setting up the first CEEPUS network operating in the area of law in Central Eastern Europe. In the first case, the objective was to study the relationship between three legal systems: international law, European Union law and domestic laws; in the second case the objective is to study the situation of minorities in the Central European region. This co-operation resulted in special forms of joint education and training programmes such as the joint LLM degree programme in Cluj-Napoca, the experimental tandem-seminar launched in the framework of BA-level education and summer universities.

The Faculty, together with the Faculty of Law of the Babes-Bolyai University of Cluj-Napoca, launched a joint Master's programme (also accredited in Romania) with instruction provided in Cluj-Napoca in the academic year of 2005/2006. The language of instruction is Hungarian, three colleagues from Cluj-Napoca and six colleagues from Pécs are involved in the programme.

The Faculty is a member of the European organisations ERA and ELFA. The international relations of certain departments have recently become increasingly stronger. The Department of Criminal Procedure Law initiated the establishment of the Central European Criminal Cooperation, involving about a dozen foreign criminal departments and institutes.

The Faculty has no established relations outside Europe, though - upon the initiative of certain departments - several visiting professors from North-American universities have delivered lectures at the Faculty.

Interest in learning English has increased considerably and the number of courses offered in foreign languages is also growing. The postgraduate and PhD courses offered at the Faculty of Law enjoy increasing popularity. The Collection of the Legal Documents of the European Union and the United Nations Depository Library were established in 1995 at the Department of International Law, and they serve as important sources of information for businesses in the Transdanubian region.

COURSE TITLE: The Lucifer-effect and beyond. How can we prevent torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment in closed institutions? AJSZNO101501

Language of instruction: English

Form of teaching: Seminar

Form of assessment: Grades are determined by active participation at the classes (60%) and a short written assignment (40%)

Course description:

The aim of the seminar is to introduce the human rights instruments of the anti-torture principle (UNCAT and OPCAT) and give a glimpse into the practice of monitoring bodies of torture prevention (UN Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture, Committee on the Prevention of Torture of the Council of Europe and the Hungarian National Preventive Mechanism). Empirical research has proven that closed institutions (prisons, police facilities, psychiatric wards, children's homes) have a certain dynamics of functioning, which leads to a higher risk of torture and ill-treatment towards detainees or inmates. Throughout the classes students will examine the background of torture and torture prevention in the light of social psychology, clinical psychology and law.

The seminar presents the principles and methodology of monitoring places of detention: recognizing signs of ill-treatment, interviewing persons deprived of their liberty, analysing background documentation of detention. The classes also provide an insight into the everyday work and regular visits of the monitoring bodies.

1. The Lucifer-effect – why do good people become evil?
2. The history of torture and torture prevention
3. International human rights instruments of torture prevention
4. The psychology of torture 1.
5. The psychology of torture 2.

COURSE TITLE: Minorities in Europe and their International Protection AJSZNO102701

Language of instruction: English

Form of teaching: Seminar

Course description:

The European continent is ethnically diverse: few or perhaps no countries are homogenous in terms of ethnicity, thus the existence of national and/or ethnic minorities could be seen as factual question, yet it is not obvious what constitute the defining elements of a 'minority'. The aim of the course is to introduce interested students to the basics of international minority rights protection as it is understood in Europe and to give an overview of the relevant international stakeholders. Awareness raising concerning the most vulnerable minority groups is one of our main objectives.

1. Minorities in Europe: basic facts and information
2. The protection of minorities: roots and theoretical foundations
3. International organisations involved in the protection of minorities

4. The international law framework for the protection of minorities: the United Nations
5. The international law framework for the protection of minorities: OSCE
