

Linnaeus University

REGIONAL LAW REVIEW
- EIGHTH INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC CONFERENCE -
CALL FOR PAPERS 2027

Dear Madam/Sir, respected colleague,

Institute of Comparative Law (Serbia) has initiated in 2020 international scientific conference Regional Law Review (RLR) devoted to current issues of legal science and practice in the European region. In 2027 we are organising the eighth conference in cooperation with the Faculty of Law University of Pecs (Hungary) and Faculty of Law University of Linnaeus (Sweden).

The conference offers a forum for scholars who research current topics in their countries to foster a discussion on topical issues, achievements, and tendencies in the development of legal science and to assert, through a critical review, the state of affairs in a particular state or in the entire region relative to European and global standards, with a view to future developments.

We are pleased to announce that the Eighth International RLR Conference will be held on May 6-7, 2027.

Having in mind that you are an established scholar and professional in your field, we respectfully invite you to contribute and help us pave the way for future development.

We aspire for our endeavour to be recognized as a current, relevant, and conducive for regional cooperation in the area of legal science and practice. Authors are free to choose a specific topic of their interest. In 2027, we will have three thematic sections.

Section 1: Regulation of new technologies in public and private law

In an attempt for legal science and practice to follow up on the technological innovations, whole new areas of law were created, and many fields of the classical law were upgraded. Authors are encouraged to select any topic in this segment that they feel can be related to technological innovations, both in private and public law.

Section 2: Solidarity and law

Concept, normative and social operationalization and scope of solidarity in areas such as: labour law, bankruptcy law, rights of minorities and vulnerable groups, gender equality and discrimination, environmental protection law, social law, philanthropy, political and social activism (CSO work, political party work, grassroots movements and political movements), issues of professional solidarity and others.

Section 3: Human rights law in the changing global political climate

In a world where, on the one hand, new achievements in the fight for universal human rights are being affirmed, such as regulations on business and human rights, while on the other hand, there are massive violations of human rights, not only in conflict zones but also in rampant authoritarian regimes around the world, this thematic unit serves to remind us of the fundamental values of human rights as a civilizational achievement of humanity, but also to critically examine the position of human rights in turbulent times in which they are often ignored or challenged.

Important dates:

- Registration for Conference and submitting research topic and abstract by December 25, 2026;
- Submitting the research paper by March 31, 2027;
- Conference date: May 6-7, 2027;
- Publishing of the collection of papers: summer 2027.

Registration link: <https://rlr.iup.rs/abstract-submission/>.

Submitted papers undergo double blind review process and shall be included in the Conference collection of papers upon the receipt of two positive reviews. Please note that participation at the Conference will be possible only if research paper has been submitted. The deadlines set in this email will not be extended and we will inform you about the reviews in a timely manner.

Working language of the Conference is English.

If you wish to participate in the Eighth International Regional Law Review Conference, please follow instructions on RLR website: <https://rlr.iup.rs/for-authors/>.

References are quoted using Harvard style – British standard. Editorial board reserves the right not to accept papers that do not meet the minimum technical standards for publication, in accordance with the stated rules for authors.

Kindly note that we do not accept co-authorships with more than two authors per research paper.

The Conference will be held in Belgrade, Serbia. It will be possible to join via the Zoom.

There is no participation fee for the Conference.

In 2027 cycle of the Conference costs of transportation and accommodation are paid by the participants and will not be refunded by the organisers. All participants will have an organised lunch on both days of the Conference, as well as joint dinner on the first day of the Conference.

All accepted papers shall be published in collection of papers. Participation at the Conference does not imply automatic publication of the paper. A paper must go through a full peer review cycle before it is approved for publication.

RLR collection of papers has been indexed in HeinOnline Law Journal Library, as well as the DOAJ.

All other relevant information can be found on the internet presentation of RLR conference at: <https://rlr.iup.rs>.

Please bear in mind that ORCID number is required for every author (and co-author) without exception. In case you don't have ORCID profile, steps for making one can be found at this link (procedure takes less than five minutes): <https://orcid.org/register>.

If you have any questions, please contact Conference editor in chief Dr. Jovana Rajić Čalić at j.rajic@iup.ac.rs.

In Belgrade, October 2, 2026

Dr. Jovana Rajić Čalić